

2026 ADA Standards Are Here

In 2024, the DOJ and HHS adopted new Medical Diagnostic Equipment (MDE) standards issued by the US Access Board. As a result, exam tables at facilities receiving federal or state funding must now meet minimum height requirements to ensure accessibility for all patients. The deadline for compliance is coming soon.

2026 ADA Standards: Your Questions Answered

What are the new standards for Exam Table seat height?

The DOJ and HHS now require exam tables in publicly funded facilities to provide a low transfer height of 17-19 inches.

How many Exam Tables need to comply?

Facilities must have at least one accessible table, and typically 10-20% of their total equipment must meet ADA standards, depending on the facility type.

Who enforces these new standards?

While the Access Board sets the technical standards, they do not enforce them. Enforcement is handled by:

- DOJ: For state and local entities under the Americans with Disabilities Act.
- HHS: For federally funded providers under the Rehabilitation Act.

What are the compliance deadlines?

- July 8, 2026: HHS deadline for federally funded facilities.
- August 9, 2026: DOJ deadline for state and local facilities.

Do Brewer Power Tables meet these standards?

Yes. Our Access® PLUS and FLEX™ PLUS High-Low tables feature a 17" minimum height and meet all other requirements for ADA compliance.

Section 44 Tax Savings

The IRS helps small healthcare practices reduce the cost of ADA-compliant equipment. You can claim 50% of qualifying expenses, up to a $5,000 annual credit.

- Covers 50% of accessibility expenses between $250-$10,250.
- Eligibility: Practices with less than 30 employees or less than $1M in revenue.

Stack Your Savings:

Combine the Section 44 Credit with Section 179 (which allows for full expensing of equipment) and your Brewer Rebate for maximum ROI.
